Improving Employee Health, Wellness and Satisfaction

Employee Retention & Satisfaction

In a market where skilled staff is in high demand, factors including employee engagement, morale, and loyalty are vitally important. Industry experts agree that salary alone does very little to ensure long-term employee satisfaction.

Whether your challenge is to improve retention, increase morale, or to become an employer of choice, the key to winning and keeping employees is to develop a mutually satisfying and committed relationship with your employees.

Today's employees have increasingly hectic work and personal lives. Encouraging your employees to manage and maintain their good health and wellness helps you protect the welfare of your work force. It also shows your employees that you value them and are committed to their well being.

Recent studies have shown that corporate health benefits cost the average company 45 percent of its after-tax profits. Research further implicates stress in 60 to 90 percent of reported medical problems. But medical problems and stress affect the bottom line in many more ways than health care costs alone.

Absenteeism, work-related accidents, customer service problems, grievances and litigation are just a few additional ways in which poor employee health affects the productivity and profitability of a company. Finally, increasing health care costs, copays and deductibles can often times deter employees from seeking care.

Employee Health & the Bottom Line

Ken Healthcare Center is pleased to offer to Tulsa area employers and organizations our Community Wellness Program. This program can be offered to your employees or group members as an added benefit; thus allowing you to address many health and wellness concerns facing employees today.

At absolutely no cost to the company or organization, Ken Healthcare Center provides to qualified employees or group members, and their immediate family members these benefits:

- Free initial consultation and X-rays

- 20% discount on future services rendered following the initial consultation (discount usually covers any out-of-pocket expense required by copays)

Community Wellness Program

In addition, Ken Healthcare Center will conduct free, on-site Health Fairs and Health Management Workshops for your employees throughout the year. Health Fairs give your employees the opportunity to meet with one of our licensed chiropractors for an initial consultation and preliminary health screening.

Our Health Management Workshops cover topics including Weight Management, Stress Management, and Pain Management to name just a few.
