OSU: OSU HOST A SHADOW DAY FOR PROSPECTIVE STUDENTS

STILLWATER, Okla.- The Oklahoma State University School of Strategic communications will host a shadow day for prospective high school students on Feb. 16, 2011 starting at 11 a.m.

“The best way for students to learn about the school of strategic communication here at Oklahoma State University is to show them, a shadow day allows them to ask one on one questions they might have about the school to real students, shows them what facilities we have to offer, and can prove we are willing to put ourselves out there for questions,” commented Gina Noble, clinical professor for the SMSC school.

Students will need to register first online at www.okstate.edu/smsc where they can fill in their interest in different majors offered. Once students have completed the registration process, we will have students paired with an upper classman who has a major similar to the student’s interest. Students then will be able to ask questions and get hands on experience in the school.

The event is sponsored by OSU’s school of strategic communication in hopes of furthering enrollment numbers for the school. With new innovations like the iPad, updated Mac computers, and the finest broadcasting tools, we would like to show, not tell, prospective students what we can offer them if they choose to attend OSU and be a part of strategic communications.

The SMSC makes a conscious effort to prepare individuals for the professional world of communication. For further information contact Jordan Jones at jordan.f.jones@okstate.edu.
