WHO WE ARE

Make It Better is a nonprofit organization in Oklahoma City, Okla. Oklahoma State University graduate Maggie Fair founded the organization in 2011 in an effort to stop childhood bullying.

Fair said after growing up with several young cousins and a younger sister, children have become very dear to her.

“No child should have to suffer through bullying, especially at school where they should be comfortable and happy,” Fair said.

Fair and other Make It Better employees hope to see the organization have a positive impact on local Oklahoma elementary and middle schools.

WHAT WE DO

Make It Better plans to hold seminars in Oklahoma elementary, middle and high schools to spread awareness about childhood bullying.

Hefner Middle School hosted a trial seminar in October 2011 to see how students, parents and school faculty would react to the idea of Make It Better. Hefner Middle School principal Deena Rogers, as well as Make It Better employees, viewed the trial as a success.

During seminars, Make It Better employees will speak to students about bullying and the negative effects it has on everyone involved. Parents and teachers will also get a chance to speak if they wish.

WHY WE DO IT

At Make It Better, we believe that children should always feel comfortable in their educational environment. School is a place for learning and developing, not bullying.

We strive to teach students that putting others down doesn't help anyone in the long run, even the bully.

We strive to teach parents to teach their children appropriate ways to behave toward classmates and peers.

We strive to teach educators to do their part in stopping and preventing bullying in their classrooms.

We strive to teach these behaviors because we want to make life better for the upcoming generation.
